FIGHTING SIXTH.

The Regiment Took Part in a Bloody Battle at Bobong on Wednesday.

One Hundred and Fifteen Rebels Were Killed, Many Wounded and Supplies and Arms Captured—Our Loss Was One Killed and One Wounded.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—The war department has received the following cablegram:

MANILA, July 21.—Adjutant General, Washington: Capt. E. A. Byrne, 6th infantry, with 70 men, surprised by united robber bands, in Negros, numbering 450; killed, 115; wounded, many; captured, a few rifles and revolvers, many hand weapons, large quantity of stock. Fighting at close distance. Byrne's loss, one killed, one wounded, names not given. The action very beneficial for quiet of Negros. OTIS.

NOTE—There are two Capt. Byrne in the 6th infantry—brothers—Capt. Bernard A. Byrne and Capt. Charles Byrne. Both are intrepid officers and noted as thorough fighters by their men. Capt. Charles Byrne, leading his company, F, was the first commissioned officer of Hawkins' brigade to reach Fort San Juan last July—this seems to be certain. Both these Byrnes are in command of battalions, acting majors of the 1st and 2d battalions of 6th infantry.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—It was at Escalante, on the Island of Negros, that Capt. Tilley, of the signal corps, was ambushed and murdered by the natives on May 27th last. It is supposed that the band of robbers who were so severely punished by Capt. Byrne's command were a part of the same marauders. The signal service has just compiled a report on this occurrence made up from reports by the officers of

ADM. DEWEY'S RECEPTION.

The Committee Makes Public the Plans for His Entertainment While in the Capital of the Nation.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Adm. Dewey having cabled approval of the plans for his reception at the national capital the committee in charge of that event are free to proceed at once with the necessary preparations. Some time ago the district commissioners appointed a committee of 100 citizens to take representative cognizance of the admiral's return to the national capital, which committee organized and subdivided. The executive committee sketched a programme, which was approved by President McKinley, Secretary Long and the committee of one hundred. The programme provides for a suitable committee escort from New York to Washington. Probably on the afternoon of his arrival the admiral will be conducted to the east front of the capitol where Secretary Long will present the sword of honor which was voted by congress. A capacious platform, suitably decorated, will be erected for the accommodation of the president, his cabinet, the members of the diplomatic corps and other distinguished personages.

In the evening there will be a military, naval and civic parade, in which every organized body in the District of Columbia is expected to participate. This feature is to be of the torchlight variety and is to be accompanied by a general illumination, the most elaborate effects being along the line of the march. The parade will be reviewed by the president, Adm. Dewey and many of the most prominent national officials and international representatives. Following the parade will be band concerts in various sections of the city.

NEW GUN TESTED

It is the Most Formidable Weapon of the Kind the World Ever Saw.

The Muzzle Energy of the New Gun is 78 Per Cent. Greater Than That of the Old—A New Type of Mount Also Tested.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Tests at the Indian Head proving ground of a 4-inch gun, representing the latest advance in naval ordnance manufacture, has demonstrated that the United States government is in possession of the most formidable weapon of the kind in the world. The gun was designed by the bureau of ordnance, and has a chamber large enough to accommodate the charge of powder carried by the old 5-inch weapon.

With a charge of 17 pounds of perforated grain navy smokeless powder a muzzle velocity of 2,991 foot seconds was obtained, with a muzzle energy of 2,040 foot tons and with a chamber pressure of 16.95 tons per square inch. With a charge of 16.34 pounds a muzzle velocity of 2,937 foot seconds was obtained, with a muzzle energy of 1,972 foot tons. The muzzle energy of the new gun is 78 per cent. greater than that of the old.

A new type of mount for the heavy four-inch gun was also tested and worked in a thoroughly satisfactory manner.

In addition to their 12-inch turret guns the new monitors will each have an auxiliary battery of four of the new four-inch guns.

Orders were issued by the secretary assigning Commander C. O. Allibone to command the gunboat Wilmington.

SUCCEEDS SECRETARY ALGER

Elihu Root is Appointed and Accepts the War Portfolio on the Advice of His Friend Senator Platt.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Elihu Root, of New York, through Senator Platt, has accepted the portfolio of war. This is on Senator Platt's authority.

The senator came here prepared to urge Gen. Francis V. Greene, if a military man should be desired; Root, if an attorney should be wanted, and authorized to accept for either.

The president chose Root because he wanted a man qualified to decide on civil government in the colonies, which will arise.

No claims except from the state of New York were at any time considered.

New York, July 23.—Elihu Root, who has been appointed secretary of war in place of Gen. Alger, has gone to Southampton, L. I., for a rest.

Root was born in 1845, in Clinton, N. Y., and educated in Hamilton college. He was admitted to the bar and came to New York to practice. He is counsel for many corporations, including the sugar trust.

Root and Roosevelt are close friends. Root is president of the Union League club. He has a wife, two boys and a young daughter.

He is tall and slim, quiet in manner and affable, a convincing speaker and fond of sport. He plays golf almost as well as Attorney General Griggs.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Hon. Elihu Root, who is to succeed Secretary Alger at the head of the war department, has telegraphed the president that he will be here Monday. Mr. Root desires to have a conference with the president, respecting the duties of his new office before the former leaves for Champlain.

A NEW VICAR GENERAL.

Filipino Priest Leads a Movement for the Independence of the Church in the Philippines From the Spanish.

MANILA, July 24.—A Filipino priest named Gregorio Agripay, with the insurgents, is trying to lead a movement for the independence of the church in the Philippines from the Spanish priesthood. He has issued a proclamation declaring himself the vicar general of all the Filipino priests in the districts outside of American control on the island of Luzon and is inciting the priests to disobey the regulations of the church and brotherhoods. The archbishop of the district has issued a bull excommunicating Agripay and this action has increased the feeling between the Filipino and the church.

The archbishop threatened to excommunicate the owners of Spanish papers publishing announcements of protest and masonic meetings, whereon an American paper warned him that he might be bundled out of the island like any disturber of the peace if he should incite religious animosities. The Dominican friars have begun the publication of a newspaper under the title of Libertas, for the purpose of defending the brotherhood.

Fatal Revolver Accident.

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL DEAD.

The Well-Known Lecturer and Lawyer Died Suddenly at His Summer Home in Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., Friday.

NEW YORK, July 23.—Robert G. Ingersoll died at his home in Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., Friday afternoon, of apoplexy. Mr. Ingersoll went to his summer home in Dobbs Ferry two days ago apparently in good health. Shortly after his arrival there he complained of a slight indisposition.

He spent Friday morning in his room, and shortly before he was stricken his wife offered to have his luncheon sent up to him so that he would not have to walk down stairs to the dining-room below. He laughingly replied that while he did not feel quite as young as he used to, he guessed he was not yet an invalid and he would go down with the others. As he finished speaking and was about to rise he fell back in his chair. A physician was immediately summoned, but when he reached the house he found that Mr. Ingersoll had died almost instantly. The physician did not give the cause of death, but the family believe it was due to apoplexy. Mr. Ingersoll's wife and two daughters were with him when he died.

Robert G. Ingersoll was born in Dresden, N. Y., August 11, 1833. His father was a Congregational clergyman of such liberal views that he was persecuted for them, and in his early life Robert G. Ingersoll imbibed an intense hatred of Calvinism, which grew with his growth and finally made him an aggressive opponent of all generally received forms of religion.

No arrangements have been yet made for the funeral, but it will probably take place on Monday at the house, and the interment will be in Sleepy Hollow cemetery at Tarrytown.

Death came to him as he had recently expressed a desire that it should. He often in old times said he wished to die slowly, with a full consciousness, so he might tell those about him how it felt. Recently he experienced a change of desire to die painlessly and without warning.

INGERSOLL GREAT HEARTED.

Rev. Elijah P. Brown's Opinion of the Great Infidel—Sincere in Opposition to Christianity.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 22.—Rev. Elijah P. Brown, founder of the Ram's Horn, in earlier life was an infidel, but 18 years ago he turned Christian and became a preacher.

Concerning "Dob" Ingersoll he says: "During the years when I was an unbeliever myself Ingersoll was my patron saint. I knew him and loved him, and never missed an opportunity to hear him speak. He was sincere and honest in his opposition to Christianity, and he was not talking for money, as generally supposed, but because he earnestly desired to do good. He was a mistaken man, as every Christian knows, but he was an honest one. I think he was the greatest-hearted man I ever knew who was not a Christian."

SILVER LEADERS CONFER.

A Plan to Organize Their Forces Into a Distinct Party Was the Principal Theme of Discussion.

CHICAGO, July 22.—While the members of the national committee were enjoying a view of the drainage canal Friday the silver leaders were in conference at the Auditorium annex.

Those present were: John P. Altgeld, George Fred Williams, James P. Tarvin, president of the league of bimetallic clubs of the Ohio valley; Gen. A. J. Warner, president of the American Bimetallic union; C. A. Shively, of Indiana, and Morton Frewen, the English bimetalist.

It is said that a plan to organize the silver forces of the country into a distinct party formed the principal theme of discussion. It was not suggested as an immediate necessity, but as a contingency which future events might make not only expedient, but necessary.

The Two Factions Getting Ready for the Coming Struggle.

Arms Said to Have Been Received From London—Victims of the Fight the Other Day Escorted to Their Graves by a Heavily Armed Guard.

LONDON, Ky., July 21.—Clay county appears to be alive with armed men; both sides to the feud have suspended all labor and are assembled in their respective neighborhoods. Preparations for war go on. Arms are said to have been received from this point and taken to Clay county. It is believed they were for both sides.

Judge W. L. Brown, London, who has tried many mountain feud fighters, says that he regards this as the most serious trouble Clay county has ever had, and he expects to hear of a desperate fight.

Hugh Griffin and Aaron Morris were laid in the same grave. Harvey Griffin placed beside them. The funeral procession escorted the corpses to the burial grounds under a heavy guard, armed with Winchester.

The Philpot-Morris feud can be traced back over eight years. It began in the Pigeon Roost fight, in which the Philpots and Fishers were engaged with a number of alleged followers of Morris. On election day I. B. Philpot was killed, and a young man named Nicholson, a clerk in the pension department at Washington, who had come home to vote, had a leg shot off. George Cole, who last year killed Marshal Roach at Barbourville, and is now a fugitive from justice, was killed with bullets. Several others were wounded. Sam Philpot, who figured prominently in that fight, was wounded at the battle of San Juan hill.

The next fight was about six years ago. One of the Stuarts and Maj. Jack Downey, of the Chadwell-Stuart forces, were killed. The Stuarts are alleged allies of the Chadwells and Griffins in the present feud. Joe Nance and John Bowling were sent to the penitentiary on account of their participation in this battle, but were afterward pardoned.

The next engagement was four or five years ago, when Tim Philpot, Ed Fisher and others on one side were engaged by the Chadwells and George Thompson on the other. Thompson was killed, and both Tim Philpot and Ed Fisher were indicted and tried, but they were acquitted.

One other fierce but short battle occurred at Dripping Springs, Clay county, in which Dave, Hugh and Joe Bowling lost their lives at the hands of the Hamptons, who are now in the Morris-Griffin ranks. Others were wounded.

The next battle was fought on Horse Creek, at a saloon, a year ago. In this fight James Crow Philpot shot and killed William Bundy, and was in turn killed by Aaron Morris, Bundy's son-in-law. Morris was sentenced for 21 years, but on a new trial he was acquitted.

It is charged that the Whites, of the Howard-White-Baker feud, assisted him.

As a result of last Monday's battle four men, Hugh Griffin, Aaron Morris, Harvey Griffin, of the Morris side, and Ed Fisher of the Philpot faction, have been buried. Two others will probably die.

THE EPWORTH LEAGUERS.

Opening Session of the International Convention in Indianapolis Attended by Ten Thousand People.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 21.—The opening session of the international convention of the Epworth league, conducted simultaneously Thursday in Tomlinson hall and the Epworth tent, was attended by 10,000 people. Only 4,000 delegates had arrived, but Indianapolis people turned out and swelled the attendance to overflowing.

Five hundred colored delegates from the southern states arrived just before the convention opened and mingled with their brother leaguers, exemplifying the obliteration of the line of division.

The entire session was devoted to speeches. Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald, of Nashville, Tenn., representing the Methodist Episcopal church, South, delivered an address in Tomlinson hall, which kept the audience in continued good humor.

The night session was held in three places, the tent, Tomlinson hall and an opera house.

To Build a Wireless Telegraph.

VICTORIA, B. C., July 21.—An application for a charter to building a wireless telegraph from Lake Bennett, Alaska, to the Canadian Pacific railway in British Columbia has been made by W. A. Anderson and A. E. Porter, of Bennett.

Another Flood in Texas.

DALLAS, Tex., July 21.—A bulletin from Childress, 200 miles northwest, states that a cloudburst occurred in that region Wednesday night with disastrous results. The Little Red and Pease rivers are roaring torrents. It is known that the property loss is very heavy, but nothing has been learned as to the fate of the people in the inundated region, which embraces portions of Childress, Cottle, Hardeman, Wilbarger, Hall, Motley, Donley and Collingsworth counties, in the northwestern part of the state.

[LETTER TO MRS. PINKHAM NO. 7546]

"I was a sufferer from female weakness. Every month regularly as the menses came, I suffered dreadful pains in uterus, ovaries were affected and had leucorrhoea. I had my children very fast and it left me very weak. A year ago I was taken with flooding and almost died. The doctor even gave me up and wonders how I ever lived."

"I wrote for Mrs. Pinkham's advice at Lynn, Mass., and took her medicine and began to get well. I took several bottles of the Compound and used the Sanative Wash, and can truly say that I am cured. You would hardly know me, I am feeling and looking so well. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made me what I am."—Mrs. J. F. STRETCH, 461 MECHANIC ST., CAMDEN, N. J.

"I was troubled with irregular menstruation. Last summer I began the use of your Vegetable Compound, and after taking two bottles, I have been regular every month since. I recommend your medicine to all."—Mrs. MAGGIE A. BROWN, WEST PT. PLEASANT, N. J.

SIR THOMAS LIPTON'S YACHT, THE SHAMROCK.

As the British Challenger Looks When Ready to Make Sail.

the cable ship Recorder and Lieut. Alfred T. Clifton, who succeeded to Capt. Tilley's command in Iloilo.

MANILA, July 22.—The unprecedented rains of the last week have convinced observers here that military operations on a large scale or advances covering many miles will be impossible for a long time. Many miles of the country are flooded to a depth of three or four feet. The Paranaque bridge, which was considered impregnable, has been swept away, cutting off temporarily the garrisons of Imus and Bacoor from communication from Manila. In the circumstances it would be impossible to move wagon trains as the trails have become doubtful. Pack mules will be utilized if it should become possible for soldiers to make marches. The officials will have their hands full for some time in arranging for the departure of volunteers and in settling the regulars who are replacing them.

To Reopen With Union Miners.

PANA, Ill., July 22.—It is authoritatively given out that all the mines will reopen with union miners on August 15 or September 1, thus putting an end to long lockouts and differences between operators and miners which has resulted in so much loss to property, death of no less than 15 persons, and has put the state and county to an expense of fully $150,000 to protect the company's property and the lives of their workmen.

Peace Reigns.

PINE BLUFF, Ark., July 22.—The impending race war in Chicot county has been settled and peace reigns there Friday night. One Whittaker, who had stirred up a bitter feeling on the part of the blacks, was ordered to leave the community and lost no time in catching a train.

FUSE FACTORY EXPLOSION.

A Girl's Eyes Blown Out and Her Body Horribly Mangled—Two Other Persons Badly Injured.

XENIA, O., July 22.—A terrific explosion Friday morning at the Xenia Fuse Manufacturing Co., near here, injured three persons horribly. One, possibly two, will die.

The injured are: Miss Rose O'Donnell, fatally, Mrs. Ollie Davis and Ennis Wykoff. The plant, operated by Imus and Bacoor from communication from Manila. In the circumstances it would be impossible to move wagon trains as the trails have become doubtful. Pack mules will be utilized if it should become possible for soldiers to make marches. The officials will have their hands full for some time in arranging for the departure of volunteers and in settling the regulars who are replacing them.

The building, a one-story brick, is a total wreck, the walls being scattered in all directions.

Rose O'Donnell's clothes were burned off and her body mutilated in a most terrible manner. Both eyes are gone, her hands blown off and holes are torn in her body. She remained conscious long enough to state that it was through her that the explosion came about.

Mrs. Ollie Davis, a widow, with one child, was frightfully burned and will die.

Ennis Wykoff, aged 23, married, had one eye blown out, but he aided in rescuing the girls from the building.

The scenes about the building were heartrending. The fire department was called out, but the wreck did not take fire. The cause of the explosion is a mystery.

THREE LYNCHED. A CAR WRECKED.

Negroes. Identified as Members of the Gang of Assaulters, Killed.

A Hundred Men With Bloodhounds Are After the Remaining Five Members of the Gang, and if Caught They Will Be Lynched.

ATLANTA, Ga., July 24.—A special to the Constitution from Bainbridge, Ga., says: A Negro captured near Iron City Sunday night was brought to Saffold and identified as one of the assaulters of Mrs. J. E. Ogletree last Thursday night. He was lynched Sunday morning near Saffold.

The other dead Negroes were found alongside the railroad track two miles west of Bainbridge Sunday morning. The names of none of these Negroes are known. It is believed by some that the two dead Negroes found by the railroad track were the men arrested Saturday at Troy, Ala., on suspicion of being implicated in the Ogletree outrage and who were being brought to Saffold for identification.

BAINBRIDGE, Ga., July 24.—Three Negroes were lynched during Saturday night near Saffold, Ga., and the mob is hunting for five more who are believed to have been members of a gang that robbed J. E. Ogletree, agent of the Plant system at Saffold, Thursday night, afterward binding him and assaulting his wife in his presence. Since the crime was committed hunting parties have been out in search of the guilty Negroes.

One of the Negroes appeared at an old dinky's hut near Brinson, Ga., and asked to be harbored. The old man went to Brinson and informed the authorities of his presence. A posse returned with him and captured the Negro, who gave his name as Louis Sammin. The man was taken to Saffold, and was identified by Mr. and Mrs. Ogletree as one of their assaulters. He said there were eight Negroes in his gang and that they came from Augusta. He said two of the gang were not far away.

One portion of the mob went in pursuit of these two while the other hanged Sammin and riddled his body with bullets. The other two were overtaken, shot and scalped, a party bringing their scalps to Saffold Sunday evening. A hundred men with bloodhounds are after the remaining five members of the gang and if caught they will be lynched.

NOTED AGNOSTIC'S REMAINS.

The Body of Robert G. Ingersoll Lies on an Improvised Bier in the Bedroom in Which He Breathed His Last.

NEW YORK, July 24.—The body of Robert G. Ingersoll lay on an improvised bier Sunday in the bedroom in which he died at the home of Walston H. Brown, his son-in-law, in Dobbs Ferry. Many men of all sorts and conditions, but mostly humble toilers, made the pilgrimage to Dobbs Ferry in the hope that they might be permitted to gaze once more upon the noted agnostic. In no instance was the request refused. No arrangements whatever have yet been made concerning the funeral. Mrs. Ingersoll and her daughters, Mrs. Brown and Miss Maude Ingersoll, are still too much overcome with sorrow to consider the matter.

"They can not tear themselves from the beloved dead," said Mr. Farrell Sunday night. "They have not left the chamber since he passed away, except to go into an adjoining room when visitors who wished to see him called. They can not reconcile themselves to the idea that they must part with him and all allusions to the removal of the body only cause distressing outbursts of grief. It may be a few days before they are calm enough to discuss the steps that necessarily soon must be taken for the removal of the body."

SIXTH REGIMENT'S VICTORY.

It Was Greater Than at First Reported—Will Have a Salutary Effect on Similar Robber Bands.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—The war department Sunday received from Gen. Otis another dispatch giving additional particulars of the fight between Capt. B. A. Byrne, with 70 men of the 6th infantry, and robber bands in the island of Negros. It shows that the victory of the soldiers was greater than that reported in Gen. Otis's dispatch of July 21 and that the loss suffered by the robbers was considerably larger than before stated. Much satisfaction is felt by Gen. Otis over the results of this preliminary effort in dealing with this disturbing element in the island and he reports it already as having a salutary effect on other bands infesting the locality.

The President's Vacation.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—President and Mrs. McKinley will leave here the middle of the coming week for their vacation at Hotel Champlain, three miles from Plattsburg, N. Y. Quarters have been engaged at the hotel and nearly all the details of the trip have been arranged.

GREENOCK, July 24.—Sir Thomas Lipton's American cup challenger Shamrock arrived Sunday at Rotheray, Island of Bute.

It Was Blown Up by Strikers With Nitroglycerin or Gun Cotton.

Five Persons Were Badly Injured, Two or Three Probably Fatally—Houses in the Vicinity of the Explosion Were Shaken—Arrests.

CLEVELAND, O., July 24.—The rioting which continued throughout Saturday night was renewed Sunday, and there were several serious outbreaks of violence, but no clashes between the mobs and the troops.

Cars were started running as usual Sunday morning on all but one or two lines. The mobs were active early. Soon after 10 o'clock a thousand or more persons gathered on Burton street, on the south side, and proceeded to obstruct the track.

When a car came along with two policemen on board, it was attacked with a shower of stones. In spite of the policemen the non-union motorman and conductor were roughly handled. One of them named McDermott had two ribs broken and the other was badly bruised. One of the policemen fired at the mob, the bullet striking a man named Wennick. The mob assaulted the officers, both of whom were struck repeatedly with stones and but for the intervention of a priest of the Catholic church near at hand the officers might have been lynched. By this time the cars had been mixed up in the melee and a patrol wagon of police arriving the rioters dispersed and the cars were taken back to the barns. There was a serious disturbance on the Broadway line at the corner of Petrie street where a mob of 3,000 assembled in the forenoon and obstructed the track.

As a result of the shooting of the driver of a grocery wagon in South Brooklyn Saturday afternoon by a non-union conductor, the mayor of that village Sunday issued an order to the marshal to arrest all non-union conductors who carried concealed weapons. Every car was stopped and each conductor found with a revolver was arrested. All were subsequently bailed out by the company.

A small riot was started at the corner of Pearl street and Franklin avenue when a young woman struck a man who asked her to board a non-union car. A crowd of union sympathizers stoned cars and a squad of police finally cleared the street.

The company Sunday sent a note to the state board of arbitration declining to arbitrate the differences.

A Euclid avenue car, loaded with passengers, was wrecked by an explosion of nitroglycerin or gun cotton shortly before 11 o'clock Sunday night. Four persons were badly hurt, the names of the injured being:

Mrs. E. C. Martin, 79, Alanson street, compound fracture of the skull, right arm broken and internal injuries which may prove fatal.

E. C. Martin, right arm badly cut and bruised about legs and body.

Mrs. Catherine Harris, 25 Cornell street, suffering from nervous prostration.

F. A. Smith, 69 Vienna street, injured about legs and body.

Albert E. Fassett, 12 Wallace place, legs injured.

Late Sunday night it was learned that Mrs. Martin, one of the injured, would probably die. She suffered a compound fracture of the skull, had one arm broken and was otherwise injured. She was with her husband who was also badly hurt.

The explosion tore out the front end of the car smashed all the windows and destroyed the brake. After considerable difficulty the car was stopped and a call for ambulances were sent out. The motorman, William Driggers, who came from Cincinnati, was dazed by the shock, but the conductor, Frank Schroeder, of St. Louis, escaped injury.

The force of the explosion was so great that it shook all the houses in the neighborhood and was heard for a distance of two or three miles. Persons living in the neighborhood say they saw a man in a buggy stop at the corner of Kensington street, where the explosion occurred, and get out by the railroad track. He remained there a short time and then drove rapidly away.

Passengers who were on the car say the explosion seemed to lift the whole front end of the car and it ripped up the floor for more than half the distance from the front end. The car was, in fact, a complete wreck, but strange to say it did not leave the rails and was taken to the barns by the next outward bound motor.

The police were quickly summoned to the scene of the explosion and a force of men was detailed to investigate with a view of running down the person who placed the explosion on the track.

Trolley car strike Practically at an End. NEW YORK, July 24.—The trolley car strike, both in Manhattan and Brooklyn seems to be practically at an end. General Master Workman Parsons says it is not Sunday and at a meeting of the Central Federated union he launched a scheme for a new labor political party and at the same time urged upon the delegates of the various trades unions in Greater New York the expediency of contributing the fund to aid the strikers and the delegates promised their financial support.

THOSE eminent Americans, the Hon. Marcus Hanna and Hon. Ted Sloan, are just now receiving great attention from the press during their stay on the other side. In their respective lines both are past masters in the art of "running things."

The Covington Commonwealth is the latest Kentucky paper to come out with a vigorous denunciation of the workings of the political machines which deprive the people of the right to express their preference in the convention or to have their votes counted at the polls.

The Bowling Green correspondent of the Louisville Dispatch is a funny fellow. EXCURSION TO SEASHORE.

Midsummer Outing Trip to the Ocean via Pennsylvania Lines.

Persons in quest of a delightful haven at which to spend their summer vacation will be interested in the announcement that special excursions to the Seashore will be run over the Pennsylvania lines on Thursday, August 10th. Excursion tickets will be sold to ten of the most attractive seashore resorts on the Atlantic Coast, viz: Atlantic City, Cape May, Anglesea, Avalon, Holly Beach, Ocean City, Sea Isle City, Wildwood, New Jersey, Rehoboth, Del., and Ocean City, Md.

The return limit will be fifteen days, including day of purchase, and will be ample for a delightful sojourn at the seaside. The extreme return limit will be August 24, which will allow a week after returning home to prepare for school and other duties which begin with the opening of September.

The date of the excursion, August 10, is the most convenient for an outing. Business is quiet at this season, crops are gathered, and office, store and farm duties are not exciting. The thermometer usually reaches the highest point about this time. It will be a pleasing diversion to spend a week's vacation in the invigorating ocean breeze and experience the unlimited pleasures at the command of the summer idler by the sea.

For further information apply to ticket agents of Louisville & Nashville R. R. in Kentucky, who will sell excursion tickets in connection with this excursion, and will also furnish information about time of trains, etc. 2535t

"WITH BRAINS SIR!"

A great artist was once asked what he mixed his pigments with to obtain such wonderful effects. His reply was: "With brains, sir!" This would be the real answer to hundreds of people who are all the time asking what Dr. Pierce's medicines are mixed with to produce such marvelous cures. These medicines are the result of Dr. Pierce's thorough professional education; his deep study of the principles of materia medica and of the human physiology in health and disease; and above all his unparalleled practical experience.

"I thank God for giving you wisdom and knowledge, and guiding you in making these medicines," says Mrs. H. A. Ashbrook, of Austin, Louisa Co., Ark., in an earnest letter to Dr. Pierce. "After five months of great suffering I write this for the benefit of other sufferers from the same afflictions. I doctored with our family physician without any good results, so my husband begged me to try Dr. Pierce's medicine, which I did, with wonderful results. I am completely cured. I took four bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, four of his 'Golden Medical Discovery' and two vials of his 'Pleasant Pellets'."

There is no medicine in the world that has helped and cured so many weak and ailing women, as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It was devised solely for that purpose by one of America's most eminent specialists in this particular field of medical practice. Any woman may write to Dr. Pierce for advice which will be sent confidentially and absolutely free of charge.

Dr. Pierce's great thousand-page Common Sense Medical Adviser will be sent for the mere cost of mailing; paper-bound for 21 one-cent stamps, or cloth-bound for 31 stamps. It is a grand and useful book. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

The rock must have been at least 15 feet higher than the surrounding ledge, for I could see the sun through the water overhead. It was longest from east to west, and in the middle was a small projection as high as my shoulders. It was this which sent a shivering conviction through me that I had found the wreck at last, and I eagerly searched for another projection at the westerly end. After taking about 20 steps I found it, or rather I found a small lump of rock where it should have been; and this settled my last doubt. My first impression, that the forecast had broken off short—than the main, was accounted for by the fact that the whole westerly end of the mound was two or three feet higher than the middle. Walking east, to the other end, I found it several feet lower yet; so our theory as to the drift of the coral fragments had been absolutely correct. It now remained but to ascertain how thick the coating was on the northerly side, and I rapidly scrambled down to where I had first stumbled against the wreck.

I had brought the smaller steel bar with me from the proa, and this I began driving against the perpendicular incrustation of coral at a spot near the stern. At the second blow, however, I slightly lost my equilibrium, and found that the rock upon which I stood shelved rapidly. A horror of the unfathomable depth which lay but a few feet beyond made me throw myself flat upon the bottom, digging my nails into the coral lest I should slip and sink to I knew not where. Lying there until the beating of my heart slowed down to something like a normal pulsation, I saw a faint reflection of light beneath the keel—enough to show that several feet of the stern hung sheer over the precipice.

It must have been at least ten minutes before I recovered strength enough to crawl back upon the higher portion of the ledge; then, realizing that my supply of air was nearly exhausted, I braced myself firmly and began driving away with the steel bar again. The coral easily crumbled under the blows, though at that depth it was filled with live animalcules, and in a few moments the bar had penetrated several inches; then it struck something soft and spongy, in which it stuck. Rapidly enlarging the hole until I could put my hand into it without tearing the skin, I felt about for a second or two and succeeded in detaching a splinter of water-logged wood—a piece of the hull itself.

This was enough for one day. I had found the reef. I had actually found the wreck of a ship which, from its coral deposit, must have lain in the one position for over a hundred years at least—presumably the galleon Neustra Señora de Sevilla. And I had found that the coral jacket on the northerly side of her hull was less than six inches in thickness! I wanted to dance from sheer satisfaction, but it occurred to me that it might be safer to do so in the proa above water, so I started back toward her.

Now my mind was so filled with exultation at having accomplished seeming impossibilities that I tried to put my hands in my pockets and whistle as I strode along. But there were no pockets in the confounded rig, and the whistle was a mistake—a big mistake. It not only exhausted my breathing air, but it produced a concussion in that copper helmet which nearly lifted the roof off of my skull. It shook my confidence so much that, when the ringing partially subsided in my ears, I hurried along even faster toward the proa. After walking considerably farther than what should have been the proper distance I began to curse my thoughtlessness in not towing the thing along after me, instead of leaving it to be hunted up when even seconds were precious. In my nervousness I must have gone too far. Finally I turned back, looking right and left for the line which had been fastened to the lump of coquina. Just when hope had almost left me I stumbled upon the piece of rock and grasped the rope to ascend. But things seemed to be turned around. Instead of slanting to the westward, as it should have done, the line hung over toward the precipice.

Thinking that I had surely lost my bearings, I took a step or two under in an attempt to haul the proa directly overhead, but the rock shelved abruptly. In another second I lost my footing. I pulled frantically at the end which was fast to the rock, but only started it rolling after me. Then I clutched at the bare coral, but it was too late. Over I went, and the rock came with a jerk which nearly pulled the line from my grasp. Feeling sure that the line would hold at 50 feet, I clung to it desperately. For just the fraction of a second it did hold. Then I could feel those loops slowly but remorselessly pulling loose, and I shot downward.

Then down until the pressure gripped my arms and legs in an iron vise—until the blood gushed from my nose and ears. The water grew icy cold, and darker—darker. The helmet seemed filled with rushing noises, with whispings and mocking laughter. I tried to tear away the lead weights which hung from my belt and shoulders, but they wouldn't budge. For a moment or two I must have become delirious; I was missing Dorotea's sweet lips, McPherson was talking about Gladstone in his broadest Scotch, Sam Hung Foo was making bobbly about a pink devil with red stomach and gilded ears, every face I ever knew flashed before my eyes as if the lens were a kinetoscope. Then—there came a jerk at the line! It must have caught on something. I knew I hadn't fastened the other end. To stay at that depth another second would have meant unconsciousness and death. Fearing with every tug that my weight, added to that of the rock, would pull the line loose, I hauled myself up, hand over hand, though the exertion was so great on account of the pressure that every motion seemed likely to burst a blood vessel. Of course, in doing this the air in the knapsack counted for a good deal; in all probability I couldn't have sunk much lower unless it had exploded; but the weights would have held me at that depth had it not been for that slender bit of rope. For several fathoms it needed but the slightest tug to send me shooting upward, and as the pressure increased I was better able to use my arms. My strength was going fast, however, and nothing but the animal instinct to fight for life saved me. Approaching the surface, I became weaker—or it required more strength to haul the extra weight—and when I finally got my arms across the gunwale and outtrigger it was impossible to move another inch. The supply of air had given out, and my last conscious motion was to unscrew the helmet lens.

In a few moments the fresh air revived me, and I succeeded in crawling into the proa. Then I got out of the diving suit, took a strong pull at the braudy flask, and hauled in my line. It had run out so rapidly, after fetching loose from the mast, that a snarl had caught the other steel bar and jammed it under the outrigger. Otherwise—well, I didn't like to think of that.

It is curious what an affection one will sometimes feel for inanimate objects. I petted that coquina anchor as if it had been a living creature. You see, we had gone down into the valley of the shadow together, and but for a direct interposition of Providence would have been likely to remain there. I must have been altogether upset by the experience, for, after hauling the rock on board, I held it in my lap and almost cried over it.

The position of the proa, over deep water, was explained by the light puffs of wind, which for an hour or two had shifted to the west'ard, as it will sometimes do shortly before the change of monsoon. But in half an hour it was again blowing steadily from the northeast, and I started on my return to Agaña.

It was then two o'clock. Having the breeze well forward, I calculated that it would take me at least six hours to get back; but the witch of a boat made good headway within five points of the wind, and I sighted Tinian, bearing a little north of east, at four o'clock. Holding on the same course for half an hour, Agaña then lay to the southeast'ard; and I put the proa about for a straight run in.

When about ten miles off shore, however, I discovered that I had company; for bearing down from the north'ard was the biggest catamaran I ever saw. The hull must have been at least a hundred feet long, and the sail looked like a gigantic balloon. The instant I noticed it, two words flashed through my mind—"Padre Sebastiano"—and I was convinced that my oleaginous shipmate was coming to pay Guajan a visit.

walked or rode that distance when they could travel in proas, there was but one chance in a thousand of any boat's being seen beating in—especially as the place had the unsavory reputation of being haunted. On the land side there had been an old sugar plantation known as Mount Tarofofo farm, but the gobernador had mentioned it as being abandoned; and the mountain, or bluff, shut out all view of the sea.

The more I thought of it, the more it seemed exactly the place I wanted. It needed but the falling off a few points to head for the Cocos island instead of Agaña, and by half-past six I passed it as close in shore as it was safe to go. By seven o'clock I had reached sufficiently to the east'ard for a straight run into Tarofofo, and, going about, rounded Point Paiepoue just at dusk. As the depth of the water and the exact bearing of the bluffs were accurately shown upon my chart, I had no difficulty in running ashore at the westerly head of Paiepoue cove, which I judged to be completely sheltered from observation on the land side. After lowering the sail, I noticed that the rocks descended abruptly into the water at the spot I had selected, and was on the point of running along to where the chart showed a small creek, when a slight opening attracted my attention. The precipice was so close that I could have tossed a pebble against it, and the spot so perfectly sheltered that I felt safe in using my lantern. Outlines were becoming indistinct in the gathering darkness, but the moment I turned on the current it revealed a fissure, about four feet wide, which led diagonally into the face of the rock. There was a good three feet of water right up to the opening, and upon throwing the light inside I could see that it ended in a cul de sac with perpendicular walls.

If I had searched the entire archipelago it would have been difficult to find a place more perfectly suited to my requirements; when I came again, in broad daylight, the fissure was invisible 100 feet away. It was something of a task to unload the contents of the big chest, but in a short time I had them stowed away under a tarpaulin, 60 feet from the opening, and was ready to leave the cove. The moon was not yet up, but the starlight was sufficient to navigate by, and I reached Agaña by 11 o'clock. As the big proa I had seen was of too heavy draught to run across the shoal in front of the town, I was not surprised at her absence. The lights about the gobernador's quarters were sufficient indication that visitors had arrived, and I managed to sneak up the back steps to my room without attracting attention. It was well that I did so, for my face was a sight. Little rivulets of clotted blood covered the lobes of my ears and my upper lip; my eyes looked like burnt holes in a blanket; and, altogether, I presented a most dissipated appearance.

Padre Sebastiano was cordiality itself, but I could see that lay brother Felipe's miracle was working in his mind, and that he was trying to figure it out upon natural grounds. I was upon the point of asking him how he happened to find the big proa so conveniently forthcoming when he decided to proceed down the islands, but reflected in time that, if I had been fishing to the east'ard, as I had explained, it would have been obviously impossible to see his flagship; so I pumped him dry upon Ladrone data instead.

The Agaña padres regarded his visit as complimentary in the highest degree, respectfully swallowing his yarn about collecting materials for island history; but I couldn't help chuckling to myself when I pictured his examination of Fray Ignacio's mummy and its precious charge. Sebastiano and I were adversaries; there now seemed but little doubt of this fact. And the more I thought of it the more certain I felt that my motions were likely to be watched during every hour of the 24. Every time I went sailing alone, there was a strong probability that the big proa would keep me well in sight. Making me the cat's paw to secure his chestnuts would comfort Sebastiano's very liver.

CHAPTER XI.

That the combination against me had strong odds in its favor seemed obvious; and I began to speculate upon how far it was safe to trust Senorita Dorotea. Strolling down to the beach with her, before retiring—just to throw Sebastiano off his guard—I learned with intense satisfaction that she both feared and detested the man. She whispered also that her father had reason to suspect the padres Julian and Sebastiano of using their influence against him in Manila. For a moment or two I had a suspicion that she and the gobernador might be under the padre's influence and trying to work themselves into my confidence with the intention of betraying me afterward. But the more I thought of this the more improbable it seemed. In the first place, relations between the educated classes and the priesthood in Spain are rapidly approaching those which obtain in Italy—neutrality on the surface, distrust beneath. Then, it seemed as though the senorita must know too much to look upon Sebastiano in other than his priestly character; and if the friendship between us was warming as rapidly as I thought, it was reasonably safe to stake her woman's heart against her head.

Finally, deciding to risk it, I asked her if she cared to spend Monday upon the water with me; and she accepted the invitation with such evident pleasure that I shoved all worry about the padre clear of my mind for the time.

When Monday morning came, we breakfasted in the patio and made an early start before Sebastiano appeared, sailing leisurely around Cocos reef as if we had the day before us and were disposed to take things easy. When I asked Dorotea if she had ever sailed into the bays on the east side, she said that, as it was usually rough and windy there, few of the islanders cared about it, only remaining in the little villages during the wet monsoon or while they were gathering rice and sugar crops. She was willing to go anywhere I chose to take her, however, and had no suspicion of my object until we headed into Paiepoue cove for the instruments and diving apparatus. Then, before taking them from the fissure, I told her of my intention to search for something under the sea at Santa Rosa reef, and asked if she would help me. Looking straight into my face for a moment, she said:

"Does not Senor Enrique know of a reason why I would do anything in the world for him?"

"Nothing more than the evidence of your friendliness, senorita mia."

"So! But you do have the bad memory. It may seem nothing that you try to give great pleasure to a senorita whom you never have seen. I suppose men do think it matters little to a woman whether she does appear like other women or like una barbara? Yet you must have known, Enrique, or you would not have tried to do me la gran benevolencia on el vapor, when mis primas despreciables did me defraudar ignominiosamente—"

"Why, how the dickens did you find out? Who told you?"

"Yourself, senor."

"It? How? Impossible!"

"You did just tell me, by your exclamacion. I but guessed before. True, Senorita Palacios did say that you were un generoso—that you did like my picture all of the time—also that if I did find anything which I could not understand, you all about it would know. Then, mis primas in Manila did write the letter about the trimming they did have put upon las vestidas. Y contera! they were as described. But there were others, not of the style antiguo. And of them there is no explanation in the letter."

"Oh, well, don't say any more about it. You caught me nicely, I must say. It was the senorita's generosity, not mine. She was very kind, and it was all her doing. Now make yourself comfortable, and we'll try to find Santa Rosa."

The dress business was dangerous ground, and I didn't want to discuss it; there was the possibility of her resenting an implication that her appearance in the picture wasn't perfect. Then, again, I couldn't tell how the other girl's having made such a present, merely from the desire to please Halstead and myself, would strike her.

Benjamin Franklin's Nepotism.

When Franklin went to France in 1776, he took his grandson with him to "give him a little French language and address." With still other ends in view, so soon as he was settled in Paris, he "sent him to finish his education at Geneva," as "I intend him for a Presbyterian as well as a republican." Here the boy remained four years, and then returned to live with his grandfather, who wrote the mother: "I have had a great deal of pleasure in Ben. He is a good honest lad, and will make, I think, a valuable man." "He gains daily upon my affection," and "we love him very much." Young Bache came to America with his grandfather, and by his aid was established as a printer, Franklin supplying all the equipment for the office, which he left him in his will, together with other property. In his behalf, also, he asked Washington for some public office, an application which shared the same fate as that he had made for his other grandson, by being refused. It was the common feeling of the time that Franklin had used civil office to serve his family more than to serve the public, and so there was sufficient prejudice to make exclusion of his relatives almost a policy with the new government. This discrimination, in time, led to ill feeling, and eventually Benjamin Franklin Bache became the standard-bearer of the journalists who abused Washington.—Paul Leicester Ford, in Century.

His Birthday Gift.

When Mrs. Ransom went away for a fortnight's visit she called her two boys to her and said, firmly: "Now, Rob, I want you and Ned to promise me that you will not tease papa to take you to the football game next week. If he wants to go he might wish to be with some friend, and not have the care of little boys like you. And don't forget that you are to give papa something bought with your own money for his birthday." The boys promised, and the mother departed. The fact that the birthday and the football game occurred on the same date seemed particularly unpropitious. But the day before Rob had a sudden inspiration, the glow of which was soon shared with his brother. On Mr. Ransom's plate at breakfast the next morning was a somewhat soiled envelope, on which was printed in painful letters: "Happy Birthday." Opening it the beneficiary found two dingy quarters wrapped in a half-sheet of paper which bore the words: "To be a ticket for the Game." And looking up he encountered the gaze of four wistfully hopeful eyes, whose owners had no reason to regret their strategy.—Youth's Companion.

He Obeyed the Rule.

Arthur, who is forbidden to speak at the table, had his revenge the other day. As dinner began he was very uneasy, and finally said: "Ma, can't I speak just one word?"

"You know the rule, Arthur."

"Not one word?"

"No, Arthur, not until your father finishes the paper."

Arthur subsided until the paper was finished, when he was asked what he had to say.

"Oh, nothing! Only Nora put the eustards outside the window to cool, and the cat has been eating them up!"—Tit-Bits.

DR. CALDWELL'S SYRUP PEPSIN CURES CONSTIPATION.

MILLET'S "GLEANERS."

There be Thy faithful children, Lord,
The gleaners of the field;
The golden-loaded wains are gone
With all the harvest's yield;
Yet some few scattered straws are left,
Which diligence may find;
A thousand sheaves he took away
That left not one behind.

Across the stubble field I hear
Sweet revelry and din,
As when the reaper to his barns Draws his last wagon in;
He thanks, Thee, Lord, with merriment
And custom-honored praise,
While round about his naked fields
The gleaners go their ways.

Small thought has he for those who pinch
And wear their lives away,
With just enough of strength and hope
To keep the wolf at bay;
His is the lot of better blood,
Than flows in common veins;
For him, O Lord, Thy sun doth shine
And fall Thy gentle rains.

What matters it when winds do howl
And snow fills all the sky,
That others huddle in their huts
To hunger, freeze and die?
Has he not used his talent well,
And thanked Thee morn and night?
Dost Thou not shield him with Thy love
And clothe him with Thy might?

I wonder, Lord, if Thou shouldst come
When this our harvest ends,
Wouldst Thou be found where barns are full
Or where the gleaner bends?
Thou soughtest not in places high
For men to follow Thee,
But where the fisher cast his nets
In quiet Galilee.

And well I know wert Thou again
To seek for friendly ears,
That Thou wouldst pass the manor house,
And pass the city's marts,
And pass to some most lowly soul—
Some gleaner of the field;
Come, follow me, and thou shalt glean
A more abundant yield.

Among the Mists

THE cliff was brown with autumn, and the sun was changing the grey sea to blood-red where sea and sky met. The waters seemed illimitable, but a few miles across were the shores of France. The strains of the band which was playing on the pier were mellowed when they reached the cliff, and the hackneyed song of the cornet solo was not without romance.

Clifford Davenport felt this as he settled himself on a seat near the verge of the cliff. He was artistic, and the soft loveliness of the evening soothed his soul. She would come, he knew.
She had come regularly every night,
and his brief holiday from the hurry
of Fleet street had been very pleasant, for nature had made him an artist before the world forced him to become a journalist.

It had been an ordinary seaside flirtation. She had red-gold hair, and he an artist's appreciation, and the three weeks had been quite idyllic. Now he felt a little uncomfortable, for he was going to inflict pain. He was going to say good-bye, for the affair had not been serious on his part; and, besides, there was somebody else who had not red-gold hair, but was rather vulgar and rather rich. He was conscious of some amount of pity for her, and was pleased with himself for it. Yet he feared the dumb sorrow of her eyes.
He knew the sorrow would be dumb, because she was a woman and could suffer in silence. Presently she came, moving softly across the brown grass to the seat and sank gracefully into it.
He threw away the cigar he was smoking.

"Ah, Clifford, how restful you look!
Why do not men cultivate rest more?
They are not generally so eager to do nothing."

"No; they set out with being eager to do something, but they are in doubt as to its nature."

"And end by doing nothing. The result is the same. That must be very dispiriting, don't you think? It accounts, though, for the terrible ugliness of middle-aged men."

"All middle-aged men are not ugly," he remarked, with a consciousness that 37 years might be considered as bordering on that doldrums of existence.

"Yes. No man who is not ugly is middle-aged. He is either young or old."

"May, do you remember that we first met each other three weeks ago?"

"Only three weeks? It seems an eternity."

He moved uncomfortably. "That is equivocal."

"Is it? Aren't all things equivocal—all nice things? Three weeks—they have been very happy."

"Yes, very happy. What a pity it is that Providence, or fate, or some controlling influence, does not rest at these happy periods, and murder Time!"

"Poor Time! He would revenge himself by murdering the happiness.
The unutterable sweetness of these periods is their fleeting nature."

"Fleeing?" he looked up surprised.
She was taking away the ball from him and he resented it.

"Did I say fleeing? But they are fleeing, aren't they? No great happiness stays forever. A perfect gown is out of fashion almost before it is put on."

"A gown?" he ejaculated. "How can you think of gowns with such a sunset?"

"I don't know! It seemed natural.
You being a man would think of your pipe or your cigar—you were smoking when I came, you know—and I, being a woman, think of a gown."

"You look very well," he admitted, critically.

"Yes, I knew you would say that because it is true. It is appropriate—you see it is a soft gray—and your artistic spirit would naturally approve."

"Appropriate?"

"Every day has its predominant color.
To-night will be gray. It—you said—we have known each other three weeks.
I fear—"

"You fear?"

"Clifford, have you ever noticed that when any great thing is going to happen, any event which will leave behind it one of those tender regrets which haunt a life like the joy of a dream which passes in waking, nature seems to put on the half-mourning of gray?"

"The red is dying out of the sea, and the sky has grown gray. See, the mists are creeping up the cliff, and they are gray, too."

"It is nature mourning the event which is coming to pass with us."

He moved again, uncomfortably. All this was so much in the nature of what he had planned to say himself. He felt a curious sensation of having passed through all this aëon before, and resented it all vaguely.

"What event can come to pass with us? Nothing can come to us to-night but from ourselves. We are alone.
The world has folded us together."

As though to disprove his statement, two men, two blatant tourists, passed behind them, talking of cathedrals and table d'hôtes. Clifford leant back in his seat with a protest against the un-seemliness of events.

"But from ourselves," Her voice was soft, and there was a tone of complacent pity in it, either for herself or for him, which was disturbing.

"We have watched the sun set for many evenings; we have felt the cool of the air off the sea; we have sat here while the earth fell asleep and the stars crept out into the sky for their vigil.
Why should there be sorrow for us tonight?" It was not at all what he had meant to have said, but it seemed forced from him by the course she had taken.

"They must be so tired," she said,
dreamily.

"Who?" he asked, wondering.

"The stars, coming out at night and looking down at the same earth always."

"They are constant," he asserted, gloomily.

"Yes, but so tedious. Don't you think that constancy always is tedious?"

"No."

"I think it argues a small mind. You see anyone can love one thing for always—it becomes a habit and there is no merit in it."

"Love?"

"Yes, I suppose the stars love the earth or they wouldn't spend their time watching it, would they?"

"I think you are wandering from your original position."

"I am not so sure that I am. We were talking about sorrow and grayness.
Clifford, do you know that we must part to-night?"

"Part?" he said, starting rather too dramatically. She had taken the ball bodily away from him, and there was no other position left to him but that of the broken-hearted lover. It had artistic possibilities, though, he reflected.

"Yes, part. It is very sad, but we shall each have a pleasant memory to look back upon."

"It will be a painful one for me."

"Perhaps so, but it will be a quiet, comfortable, tender sort of pain which will be almost pleasant. We have been all in all to each other for three weeks, which is a very long time."

"It has passed like a moment of sunshine."

"That shows how pleasant it has been. Really, when one comes to think of it, three weeks' pleasure is more than we could reasonably have expected in this world."

"You have never felt for me what I have felt for you."

"Yes, I think I have. It is rather difficult to determine, because we have no standard of comparison."

"And that is why you dressed in gray?"

"It was a compliment to your artistic appreciation of the fitness of things."

"A foretelling of my life?"

"Yes. The trimmings are of soft pink."

They got up and strolled in silence towards the lights of the town. The murmur of many voices came to them on the air. Some bats were flying heavily, and the band was still playing in the distance.

"Let us part here," she said.

"Yes, it is better so. Here we are alone—before us is the world. I shall go into the world leaving my soul here
among the mists."

"It is a great pity, but it is fate," she said, with a keen delight in the romance of the parting.

"Good-bye," he said, and they parted.
A little later he lit a cigar and laughed.

NICELY TAKEN IN.

He Knew the Ways of the World But Got Caught
Napping.

The man in question used to say he knew the ways of the world as a cat knows its own kittens, and laugh at the wiles of those who live on their wits.

He had been economizing at every turn for a long time, saving all that he could, for the holidays were near at hand. He left his station the other night in the teeth of a blizzard. The buses had stopped running, and he buttoned his coat about his neck with a determination to walk home rather than squander the price of a cab.

"Beastly night," said a tall, imposing man, as he tapped our friend on the shoulder. "Get into my carriage here; I'll be with you in a minute, and he dashed into the station after his bag. It was too good an offer to be refused, and the traveling man put in most of his time in thanking his benefactor, who politely insisted that the pleasure was his.

"Just tell him where to drive to," he said, later; "I get out here. No, don't mention
it. Glad of the opportunity."

Now, it was a horrible night, and he was using another man's carriage, so he could not do less than to treat the driver and give him a cigar to keep his nose warm. At last the economical traveler was at home, and he shouted a cheery "good night," as he slammed the door of the vehicle and started for the house.

"Here," cried the driver, "you've forgotten something."

"Thanks. What is it?" as he hurried back.

"Nine shillings."

"What?" as the harrowing conviction seized him. "Why, the other man."

"That other man he blowed. I don't know him from a crow. You took the cab."

Then our man drove off the voice of the storm while he was settling, and the going in, swore his wife to secrecy. That's the way it got out.—Pearson's Weekly.

Elasticity of English.

Where does the slang of the day originate?
When a new verbal profligacy comes into currency its origin is as mysterious as its effect is startling. On a roof garden last night a weary-looking youth in a straw hat that had seen better days and with tell-tale puffs beneath his eyes, released two straws from his mouth long enough to remark, languidly, that he was suffering from a horrible case of the "ding-bangs."

His companion, who looked like a vaudeville lady, had just remarked in a tone loud enough to be heard by her neighbors, that one of the performers was "a useless bunch of trousers."

One meant that his head ached, the other that the object of her criticism was professionally incompetent. It's a great language.—N. Y.
Commercial Advertiser.

Another Illad.

The following story proves what hardly needs proving, that a man may handle himself without being a coward. It was in the book stall of a department store; it was in a real bookstore; a bookstore, moreover, where you would expect to find salesmen who know books. A friend of mine went in the other day and asked for Pope's "Illad."

The salesman went away to look for it.
Presently he returned with a book in his hand. "We haven't Pope's 'Illad,'" he said,
"but we have an 'Illad.' It's by Homer, though."—Washington Post.

A Dash of Gayety.

The doomed man feared the people who waited along the way to the scaffold.
"See how they stare at me!" he cried, agonizingly.

"Yes, that's what you might call rubber-ing it in!" observed the executioner, playfully, deeming it not amiss to inject an element of gayety into this otherwise somber affair.—Detroit Journal.

The Conclusion.

"And you say the idiot of a teacher told you that you had an extravagant fool of a father?"

"That's what he meant?"

"But what did he say?"

"He said it was a criminal folly to waste money on the education of such a chump as I am."—Indianapolis Journal.

er's wife?" Anna—"No, indeed. Just think of being able to make him cut his sermons short."—Kansas City Independent.

REPORTING THE WEDDING.

As It Was Turned In by the Young
Reporter Fit for the Waste Basket.

A reporter on a newspaper was given the task of writing up a very swell wedding.

He composed a fine account of the wedding ceremonies, but, like many young writers, he tried to use too flowery language, and, becoming excited, he forgot to be accurate in the use of words. The description of the beauties of nature read something like this:

"The silvery moon hovered over the scene, and the stars twinkled merrily; the soft sighing of the wind in the trees near by came like a benediction of love to the happy couple entering upon the voyage of life together."

The reporter sent in his copy, but just as the paper was about to be sent to press he rushed into the editor's room, all excitement, saying he wished to make a correction in the account of the wedding, as, according to the almanac, there was no silvery or any other moon on that night.

And the reporter also said that he had blundered in writing of the "contesting" parties instead of "contracting" parties.

After a few more corrections the account of the wedding was found available for the editor's waste-basket.—Tin-Bits.

"An Przyskalski."

"How long have you been in this country?"

"Wilhelm McKinley."

"Who wrote the declaration of independence?"

"Congress."

"Do you swear to obey the laws of this nation?"

"Jorge Washington."

"What form of government is this?"

"Bryherm Linking."

"That will do. You're accepted. Step down, I say."

"Der Star Spangled Banner!"

"Don't you understand me? I told you you were all right."

"cheer! cheer! cheer, hooray!"

Is this an examination for admission to citizenship? No, gentle reader, the man wants to be a soldier, and our great and good government has declared that a soldier needn't have any more brains than a voter.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Summer Costuming.

"I don't believe in girls a-dressin' in stiff clothes durin' the hot weather," said the adipose elderly lady with the large diamond earrings and finger rings at the boarding house breakfast table the other morning.

"I make my two daughters dress in negligent costumes all summer, no matter where they're a-goin'." "Maw!" said her daughters, warningly, from the other side of the table, and the fox terrier pup turned a fit out in the basement vestibule.—e.—Washing-

Little Pimples Turn to Cancer.

Cancer often results from an impurity in the blood, inherited from generations back. Few people are entirely free from some taint in the blood, and it is impossible to tell when it will break out in the form of dreaded Cancer. What has appeared to be a mere pimple or scratch has developed into the most malignant Cancer.

"I had a severe Cancer which was at first only a few blotches, that I thought would soon pass away. I was treated by several able physicians, but in spite of their efforts the Cancer spread until my condition became alarming. After many months of treatment and growing steadily worse, I decided to try S. S. S., which was so strongly recommended. The first bottle produced an improvement. I continued the medicine, and in four months the last little scab dropped off. Ten years have elapsed, and not a sign of the disease has returned."

R. F. WILLIAMS, Gillsburg, Miss.

It is dangerous to experiment with Cancer. The disease is beyond the skill of physicians. S. S. S. is the only cure, because it is the only remedy which goes deep enough to reach Cancer.

Saving Silver at the Mint.

Perhaps the most interesting scheme for the recovery of waste silver at the local mint is that applied to the utensils of the melting gang. The big iron stirring rods, the dippers, the strainers and the ladles that come in contact with the molten metal are laid aside at intervals and sent down stairs. They are covered with what looks like brown rust, but is really oxidized silver. Suppose, to digress a moment, one desired to get a coat of paint off the outside of a house. In such event the plan of scraping away the house and leaving the shell of paint standing would be regarded as somewhat eccentric, yet that is substantially the method adopted at the mint. The implements are placed in baths of sulphuric acid, which attacks the iron or steel, but leaves the silver untouched. Little by little a strainer, for instance, will entirely disappear.

That is to say, the original strainer disappears and leaves in its place a hollow silver counterpart, delicate as an eggshell. They are very curious, these fragile casts. Their surface is a sort of natural filigree, honeycombed with innumerable fantastic perforations. The reproduction of a bolt or screw is sometimes as perfect as an electrolyte, but they are hurried remorselessly back to the crucible and thus pursue their cycle until at last they find their Karma in a minted coin.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Wills of Some Women.

"Some women derive a great deal of enjoyment out of making their wills," remarked a lawyer the other day. "They change them as often as they change their gowns. It is only a few days ago that I came down to my office to find one of my fair clients anxiously awaiting me. She was in a great state of nervousness.

"Oh, Mr. Blank," she exclaimed, "I've come to change my will."

"What! Again? I asked."

"Yes," she said. "I discovered last night that Mrs. —, whom I had intended to leave my diamond tiara to, has been saying spiteful things about my poor, dead husband—said he made his money out of green grocers and an off beer license—odious creature that she is. I could never rest in my grave if I thought she would benefit a farthing's worth from my death."

"Cross her off the will, please, Mr. Blank, and substitute the name of—let me see, now; whom can I leave the diamond tiara to? Well, I'll think it over tonight and come and see you in the morning."

"And so on," continued the man of law. "That good lady changed her will six times in as many months, and the names in it would have filled a small directory, while the rest of it suggested an auctioneer's catalogue."—London Mail.

Oriental Judgment on Mixed Babies.

The Greek ecclesiastical authorities at Aleppo have been called upon to decide a case which strongly recalls Solomon's famous judgment. By a strange coincidence a woman and her daughter both gave birth to a female child at the same time. But the babies got mixed, and, as one of them was ugly and the other pretty and healthy, both mothers claimed the latter. The elder woman maintained that, as all her other children were handsome, the ugly child could not be hers, while her daughter claimed that, being young, handsome and strong, she could not be the mother of a weak and ugly babe.

The religious chief of the town settled the affair in a summary way. He adjudged the beautiful child to the daughter on the ground that, it being her first, the occasion was not to be made one of humiliation and disappointment, while the elder mother could afford to forego her claim since she had already had several handsome children.—Constantinople Malumat.

A Wonder Flower.

The Canadian Manufacturer reports the remarkable phenomenon of the discovery of a flower incased in a hole in an old iron casting, the flower being in a perfect state of preservation. A workman engaged in breaking up old iron at a foundry in Ontario came across an old wheel that had done service on a stationary engine for many years. On breaking it he discovered in a crevice a flower blossom in perfect condition, its color being as fresh as the day it found its way into its mysterious hiding place. It had evidently fallen into the casting when it was being poured, and in some manner escaped injury from the molten metal. As the cavity was perfectly airtight it naturally retained its freshness until exposed to view.

Her Unlaid Reason.

"Don't you wish," he asked, looking soulfully into her eyes, "that the tunnel on this line was ten times as long?"

"No," she answered. "It struck him like a dash of cold water in the face. Instantly it dawned upon him that she no longer loved him. 'They always light the car lamps when coming to the long tunnels,' she added, 'and they don't for the short ones.'—Chicago Post.

An Unconscious Press Agent.

It was a critic who uprose on the first night of the late Charles Reade's drama, "It's Never Too Late to Mend," at the Princess theater, London, in 1895, and vehemently protested against the flogging business in the jail scene as being inhuman and untrue to life. However, it was true to life, and the discussion that ensued tended to crowd the theater for many months.

Nobody Missed It.

Hicks-Barry made a bet that every person who came by his fence would touch it and he won.

Wicks—Nonsense! How did it happen?

Hicks—He merely stuck up the sign "Paint," and, of course, everybody considered himself called upon to feel of the fence.—Boston Transcript.

Past, Present and Future.

The surplus of a life assurance company is of all things the most important to policy holders. It shows:

1. The good and careful management of the past.
2. The strength and security of the present.
3. The probability of continued profitability in the future.

The Equitable has a surplus of over fifty-seven millions of dollars, which is the largest surplus of any life company in the world.
